(a). For goods accepted by the lessee and not repossessed by or tendered to the lessor, and for conforming goods lost or damaged within a commercially reasonable time after risk of loss passes to the lessee (section 2-1219):

- (i) Accrued and unpaid rent as of the date of entry of judgment in favor of the lessor;

(3). The lessor may dispose of the goods at any time before collection of the judgment for damages obtained pursuant to subsection (1). If the disposition is before the end of the remaining lease term of the lease agreement, the lessor's recovery against the lessee for damages is governed by section 2-1527 or section 2-1528, and the lessor will cause an appropriate credit to be provided against a judgment for damages to the extent that the amount of the judgment exceeds the recovery available pursuant to section 2-1527 or section 2-1528.

[1991, c. 805, §4 (NEW) .]

(4). Payment of the judgment for damages obtained pursuant to subsection (1) entitles the lessee to the use and possession of the goods not then disposed of for the remaining lease term of and in accordance with the lease agreement.

[1991, c. 805, §4 (NEW) .]

(5). After a lessee has wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of goods, has failed to pay rent then due or has repudiated (section 2-1402) a lessor who is held not entitled to rent under this section must be awarded damages for nonacceptance under sections 2-1527 and 2-1528.
