‘Sec. 1. 19-A MRSA §951-A, sub-§1-A is enacted to read:

1-A. Definitions. As used in this section, unless the context otherwise indicates, the following terms have the following meanings.

A. "Length of the marriage" means the length of time from the date that the parties were married to the date of the filing of the action for divorce.

B. "Spousal support income" means, with respect to each party and regardless of whether there are any children of the marriage, the party's gross income, as defined in section 2001, subsection 5, less, for a party who is a child support obligee, any amount the party is determined to spend directly in support of the minor child or children of the marriage as reflected on the child support worksheet and less, for a party who is a child support obligor, any amount the party is obligated to pay directly in support of the minor child or children of the marriage as reflected on the child support worksheet.

2. Types of spousal support. The court may, after consideration of the facts of the case and of all factors set forth in subsection 5, award or modify spousal support for on one or more of the following reasons grounds.

A. General support may be awarded to provide financial assistance to a spouse with substantially less income potential than the other spouse so that both spouses can maintain a reasonable standard of living after the divorce allocate equitably between spouses financial losses that either or both may incur due to dissolution of a marriage of a significant length when the family is divided into separate economic units. A spouse married to someone with significantly greater income or earning capacity is

COMMITTEE AMENDMENT

1 entitled at the dissolution of the marriage to compensation for a portion of the decrease
2 in the standard of living the spouse would otherwise experience, if the length of the 3 marriage is of sufficient duration that equity requires that some portion of the loss be 4 treated as the spouses' joint responsibility.

5 (1) There is a rebuttable presumption that general support may not be awarded if 6 the parties were married for less than 10 years as of the date of the filing of the 7 action for divorce. There is also a rebuttable presumption that general support may 8 not be awarded for a term exceeding 1/2 the length of the marriage if the parties
9 were married for at least 10 years but not more than 20 years as of the date of the 10 filing of the action for divorce. There is a rebuttable presumption that general 11 support must be awarded for an indefinite period if the parties were married for 12 more than 20 years as of the date of the filing of the action for divorce.

13 (1-A) There is a rebuttable presumption that a spouse is entitled to an award of 14 general support if the parties have been married for at least 10 years as of the date
15 of the filing of the action for divorce and if that spouse's spousal support income 16 as of the date of the filing of the action for divorce is equal to or less than 65% of 17 the other spouse's spousal support income as of the date of the filing of the action
18 for divorce.

19 (1-B) There is a rebuttable presumption that the annual amount of any general
20 support awarded under this paragraph must equal the difference in the parties'
21 spousal support incomes multiplied by a durational factor that is calculated by 22 multiplying the number of years of the marriage by 0.015, except that the 23 durational factor may not exceed 0.3. The amount of general support must be 24 calculated on an annual basis, but the court may order the obligor to pay general
25 support on a monthly, weekly or other scheduled basis.

26 (2) If the court finds that a spousal support award based upon a presumption 27 established by this paragraph would be inequitable or unjust, that finding is 28 sufficient to rebut the applicable presumption. The court shall use the factors set 29 forth in subsection 5 and may use any other fact the court considers relevant to 30 determine whether a presumption under this paragraph would be inequitable or 31 unjust and shall make written findings supporting the court's conclusion. A court
32 may award general support in cases for which there is a presumption that no general 33 support may be awarded if the court finds that a substantial injustice will result if 34 there is no award and the court makes written findings supporting the court's 35 conclusion.

36 B. Transitional support may be awarded to provide for a spouse's transitional needs, 37 including, but not limited to:

38 (1) Short-term needs resulting from financial dislocations associated with the 39 dissolution of the marriage; or

40 (2) Reentry or advancement in the work force, including, but not limited to,
41 physical or emotional rehabilitation services, vocational training and education.

42 C. Reimbursement support may be awarded to achieve an equitable result in the overall
43 dissolution of the parties' financial relationship in response to exceptional 44 circumstances. Exceptional circumstances include, but are not limited to:

- 1 (1) Economic misconduct by a spouse;
2 (2) Substantial contributions a spouse made towards the educational or 3 occupational advancement of the other spouse during the marriage; and 4 (3) Economic abuse by a spouse. For the purposes of this subparagraph,
5 "economic abuse" has the same meaning as in section 4102, subsection 5.

6 Reimbursement support may be awarded only if the court determines that the parties'
7 financial circumstances do not permit the court to fully address equitable 8 considerations through its distributive order pursuant to section 953.

9 D. Nominal support may be awarded to preserve the court's authority to grant spousal
10 support in the future.

11 E. Interim support may be awarded to provide for a spouse's separate support during 12 the pendency of an action for divorce or judicial separation.

13 Sec. 3. 19-A MRSA §951-A, sub-§4-A is enacted to read:

14 4-A. Award at expiration of child support obligation. If a child support obligation
15 for the minor child or children of the marriage will terminate within 3 years of the 16 anticipated date of a final judgment awarding general support, the court may establish a
17 separate general support award that will take effect upon the termination of the child
18 support obligation.

30 ~~and~~

31 ~~(2) Child support for the support of a minor child or children of the marriage~~
