2018 NEW MAINE LAWS Implications for Advocates

During the 2018 Legislative Session, the Maine Legislature considered many bills that have implications for your work. As always, there were many bills that did not become law, including a bill to create a named crime of female genital mutilation and one to send a Victims' Bill of Rights constitutional amendment to the ballot.

Below you will find a selection of laws resulting from this session, all of which became effective August 1, 2018 (with the exception of P.L.2017, Ch. 455, which will become effective at a later date). For a more complete list and the statutory language for each selection, please refer to our 2018 Legislative Session Review.

Public Law Chapter 336: An Act To Increase the Penalty for Visual Sexual Aggression against a Child

What does it do?

This law adds all of the Chapter 12 crimes (Sexual Exploitation of Minors) and most of the Chapter 35 crimes (Sex Trafficking, Prostitution, and Public Indecency) to the statute which allows a third offense within ten years to be charged as a class higher than the individual would otherwise be charged.

What does it mean for your work?

This law was created in response to an offender who had engaged in the crime of exposure several times. The sponsor and Legislative committee hoped to ensure greater accountability when there was a pattern of criminal behavior. When working with a victim navigating the criminal justice system they should know that the perpetrator could face a higher class crime if there is a history of certain

Engaging in prostitution was excluded from the crimes that can be used to elevate the class. This crime was excluded to prevent enhanced prosecution of those engaging in prostitution due to circumstance or coercion, based on the recognition that criminalization for anyone engaging in sex work limits their options and safety.

In FY20 we helped answer questions like:

What is our obligation to protect the privacy of deceased clients?

Where can someone who has sexually harmed others go for help?

How does a human rights-based approach to human trafficking fit with an end demand intervention?

Where can I refer formerly incarcerated survivors who want support re-entering into community?

How should we be talking to schools about sexting?

What is the most effective way to engage in remote training, community ed, and prevention efforts?

How do we support survivors with suicidal thoughts and comply with Maine's duty to warn laws?

A client I'm working with has been charged with false reporting, what can I do?

How can we support survivors to find justice outside of the criminal system?

What should a survivor know before they talk to the media?

Are we required to make mandated reports on information that we only have seen in a public document?

How can we talk about online safety in a way that does not vilify the internet?

How can we decrease burnout for on-call advocates?

I think my client might have experienced trafficking-can you help me?

What does my center need to know about serving survivors who are also offenders?

Tools for Providers & Partners

Have you ever been raped or sexually harassed?

You have the right to talk to a trained person from outside of the prison. They can help.

You can get free private help. Even if what happened was before you got here.

For free, private help call 1-800-871-7741.

This number is approved and private. It can be used anytime. You may need to wait to be connected or ask to be patched through to an advocate.

You can also send a letter to report to: PREA Coordinator York County Jail 1 Layman Way Alfred, ME 04002

If it happened in this facility, you can report to the Dept. of Corrections. Call 1-855-279-4763.
