I am the mother of two girls ages 4 and 6. My hope is that the sale of flavored tobacco is retired in Maine so when my girls are in High School they can freely use that bathroom without worrying if there are other students in there vaping. Unlike today's students. With the ever rising health care costs that we all face any step we can make in decreasing the sale of carcinogenic and addictive substances feels like a win! As a small business owner I understand the need to meet bottom lines and one's need to provide for their families. I think the expectation should be anyone with the privilege of operating their own business must take on the social responsibility that what they are selling is not directly contributing to the deterioration of someone's health and livelihood. If businesses want to sell these products will they also help pay for their customers medical bills? The time has come for accountability and responsibility.
