

Ellen Kasprzyk
Steep Falls
LD 771

Women are often put in very difficult situations when they have an unplanned pregnancy. Either the unborn's father, the mother's parents or the culture they live in may produce a crescendo of tears, fears and threats pushing the mother toward something she may not actually want. Being inside an abortion facility may not be her idea and if she does not wish to follow through with her apparent decision, she must be able to change her mind and refuse services when so much is at stake and 100% irreversible.