LD 1863 – Ought to Pass

An Act to Facilitate the Provision of Medically Appropriate Levels of Care for Clients of Correctional Facilities

Joint Standing Committee on Criminal Justice and Public Safety

May 9, 2023

Senator Beebe-Center, Representative Salisbury and distinguished members of the Joint Standing Committee on Criminal Justice and Public Safety, greetings. My name is Michael Kebede, and I am Policy Counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union of Maine, a statewide organization committed to advancing and preserving civil liberties guaranteed by the Maine and U.S. Constitutions. On behalf of our members, we urge the committee to support LD 1863.

Maine has one of the highest percentages of elderly prisoners in the country, with at least 1 out of 10 prisoners over the age of 55. As a result of 40 years of tough-on-crime sentencing, our criminal justice system has undergone a gargantuan expansion. Our nationwide prison population has almost quadrupled in four decades, and with it so too has the number of elderly people in prison. Maine's prison population has more than doubled since 1983.¹ Our jail population has grown over six-fold since 1970.

Like older people in the general population, elderly prisoners tend to be more susceptible to chronic health and medical conditions, translating into higher health care costs and assistance performing daily tasks of survival. The Eight Amendment to the federal Constitution guarantees all prisoners a right to health care while incarcerated and protects them against indifference to their serious medical needs. However, prisons are not built to accommodate an aging populace and there are serious challenges and costs associated to providing adequate care within the prison settings. While we cannot erase the past 40 years of extreme sentencing and unfair and unjust criminal justice policy, there are steps we can take to reform the system both in the short and long term.

In effect, some of our prisons have become assisted living facilities in all but name. But unlike accredited assisted living facilities, they are not held to the same standards of care. This bill would help solve that problem by, among other things, requiring the Department of Corrections to provide training to licensed facilities in the community regarding the specific needs of incarcerated people. This and other reforms would hold us to the promise of our Constitution.

We urge you to vote ought to pass.
