

Max Joles
Portland
LD 209

A rail trail connecting Portland to Auburn would be a massive benefit to both communities and every community along the way.

Having a dedicated bike lane opens up regional tourism potential for cycling tourism which can attract both tourist dollars as well as incentivize local spending.

I would use the trail frequently and considering riding and overnighting in Auburn, which I otherwise would never do.

I think it has the potential to connect these cities in a really meaningful way.