I don't think it is right for you to be able to do something as life altering as changing your gender or essentially murdering a baby while you have to wait till you are 14 years old to get a nose piercing and you still need parental permission for that. I think it is foolish to think that a child knows better than their mother or father and are able to make such a big decision without parental guidance and go as far as going to a different state if they're home state doesn't allow it to get a transition or abortion.

Respectfully, Carter Wannemacher
