

Frank Lunn
Eastern Slopes Aviation Academy
LD 138

Hi,

While I don't have access to accurate data, I would assume that the Committee members do. If you look at the total airport average in the State of Maine and compare it to the total acreage in Maine, I'm sure you will find the ratio to be minimal.

Add to that fact that it would be virtually impossible for any species to require the habit of airports for survival .

And, yes, as a General Aviation pilot, I have had to avoid deer, turkeys, ravens, and foxes on runways during departure and landing.