Net Energy Billing has already been a success and we need to continue building on it. NEB benefits ratepayers and is necessary for Maine's sustainability. It's providing cost savings to ratepayers, improving the grid, reducing transmission costs, decreasing electricity loss, and increasing air quality. And getting rid of NEB would increase our dependence on expensive foreign fuel. NEB's opponents are the utility companies, not the real people of Maine. The utilities just want to preserve their profits, and the costs hit **our** environment and **our** wallets. And shame on the electeds who use low-income people as the mascot of this charade, which would make their lives materially harder. Keep Net Energy Billing and build on it.
