The recommendations of the Lower Road Rail Use Advisory Council should move forward. As a Brunswick resident with a young family, the opportunity to safely recreate from where we live to Augusta on a separate path would be an incredible opportunity. At a time when traffic fatalities are rising in Maine, providing alternatives for car travel is of the utmost importance. The new path would spur economic development, create recreational tourism in the towns along it's path, and make this part of Maine more appealing to live and work in.
