This bill makes absolutely no sense at all. There is no information to provide to the people of Maine that this will impact, but it's being proposed for approval. You don't know the route. You don't know the developer. You don't know the project. You don't know the budget. You don't know the environmental cost. You don't even know what the claimed benefit is, but you're considering approval without knowing any of this information. It's pretty hard to fathom that anyone would think that a bill with no parameters should even be proposed. It's like getting hired for a job with no idea of the duties, hours to be worked, location of the job or how much you'll be paid, but saying I have a job. Does that make any sense? I suspect the majority of Maine people would agree that it makes not sense at all.
