I support the passage of any bill that protects all seniors regardless of assets and income to remain in their homes with stabilized property taxes. Their duty to pay for the younger generation is well past its reasonable need, and they should be given the same consideration now that they have done their civic duty. I do believe that the state should be augmenting the differential (possibly through a special tax). I feel that the families with children in the schools are borrowing from the seniors to pay for the schools. So who should bear the differential now? Tax pot, or alcohol, or some other vice.
