I have the great honor of working with educators across the entire state of Maine. Regardless of their focus or training, they all know how impactful outdoor education is for the youth they serve. We see students thrive in outdoor learning environments. This isn't something that only works for high performing students, outdoor learning works for all students. It helps youth form long lasting connections to their environment and helps them truly understand how to be the best stewards of our planet. Learning outdoors improves the health and well being of learners and educators. Our State is a leader in outdoor and environmental education, let's continue to support these efforts so our teachers can do the work they know is best for all learners and so we can lead by example.
