LD 827 OUGHT NOT TO PASS.

Maine's PFAS Products Law is a first in the world law that helps protect people from toxic PFAS in products. LD 827 would provide exemptions from the PFAS law for "any "polymer-coated [cookware]...authorized by the FDA for food contact".

But, the FDA is far behind states and the EU when it comes to making sure food contact materials are safe. PFAS plastic used in cookware can flake off and become microplastics, which consumers ingest. Microplastics are a growing concern for human health.
