

Gabrielle A Cormier
Bangor
LD 975

As a survivor of rape, it makes me sick to my stomach to think someone could ever force me or any other woman to have a baby she did not want. One in five women are likely to face similar traumas in their lifetime. To force a woman to carry an assailant's baby seems like the most cruel and despicable way to treat a traumatized woman. And, if a woman was then deemed to have pregnancy complications that would put her life at risk if she was forced to carry out the pregnancy seems unusually punishing against the woman.

Luckily, I have never had to face that decision. I don't believe it is my place to decide for any other person how they should live their life and what choices affecting their life they should make. A woman having the right to choose what is best for herself and her body should be nobody's business but her own. My right to choose does not affect another person's right to choose. And please don't tell any woman that encroaching on a woman's right to choose is a pro life matter. Because in effect, women's lives are not being protected by these assumptions.

Do you want to have 50 babies so you can populate the world with more of your oppressed followers, go ahead and do so. But don't you dare use righteous speech to take away the rights of other women.

Please do not repeal reproductive rights and please continue to allow women to choose for themselves how they can manage their own bodies. It is the only right decision here.