I don't think the government should have any say on if someone decides to get an abortion, I believe it should be up to the person carrying said hypothetical child, and I worry for the safety wellbeing of my family and friends if this should pass. I don't think people should be forced to carry children they don't want, no matter why they decide they don't want it. There are many reasons why an abortion could be wanted, or even medically necessary, but I just don't believe the government should have any say on whether or not somebody can get one.
