Hello,

During a course I took with the U.S. Power Squadron, I learned that Maine's law regarding life jackets for children under the age of 13 is different from the U.S. Coast Guard's requirement. Not only is it different—it's actually more lenient. This struck me as concerning. I strongly urge you to align Maine's law with the U.S. Coast Guard's, which requires all children under 13 to wear a personal flotation device (PFD).

Thanks,
Michael Williams
