I oppose removing the rails on the so-called "Mountain Division". This important piece of infrastructure resulted from the hard efforts of our ancestors to carve and maintain a transportation means for us that follow to protect and utilize. While rail use in the US is not currently as popular as it is in Europe, there will come a time when the opinion in this country will catch-up to what Europeans already know. Removable of any components would then be regretted and reflect poorly on any decision today not to, at least, keep in place what we already have.
