I write in support of Maine's public libraries. As a former librarian and enthusiastic reader, I belong to two - in S. Bristol and Damariscotta's Skidompha Library. They are invaluable for someone my age- 83 -who doesn't get about much. I have a blind friend in my retirement home book group and she can only belong to the group because the library provides her books for the vision impaired. I see other users looking for jobs through the internet, broadening their perspective and learning new facts. My husband's public committee for the town finds rooms in which to meet, my book group meets also at the library. In fact, it is our community living room.
Gratefully,
