I'm Nick Rimsa from Portland, Maine. Since 2020, I've had the privilege of working with The Good Crust, a Canaan-based purveyor of frozen dough. The Good Crust sells to schools as far north as Fort Kent and south to York, and we typically spend four days per week in kitchens with school staff. So, we've had countless opportunities to spend time with kids—watching them try new foods and return for seconds. We, too, believe what school nutrition directors already know—a well-nourished kid is a better learner. We've seen how a consistent, nutritious meal can help students feel better in their bodies, calmer in their minds, and more ready to take on the day. Without exception, every child deserves access to good food.
