

Thomas Wolf
Glenburn
LD 1763

1. Our lakes and ponds are already suffering from extensive pollution induced by careless users. Allowing people to live on the water for a season, or seasons, will only exacerbate this problem. 2. Recreating on a state controlled resource is one thing. Living on a state controlled resource is squatting. 3. Owners of shorefront property are paying dearly for that privilege. Simply allowing someone to anchor their boat in front of another's property should be considered an impermissible taking of the view that the owner of the property has paid for.