Good Day! Some of the most faithful voters in Maine are our older folks. Well informed with lots of real life experience they rarely miss an election. My mother, age 90, is one of those Mainers. A life-long resident of Kennebec County, my mother reads the newspaper and watches a variety of news programs to get the full picture. She never misses an election - local, state or federal. But, she is also house bound. She is physically fragile and so for the last 5 years she has voted absentee. She no longer drives, so does not have a valid photo ID. I know she is not the only person in this situation. How will you tell my mother she can no longer vote? Voter fraud is virtually non existent in this country - this is a completely unnecessary piece of legislation.
