The fossil fuel companies have made billions in profits while denying to the public what their scientists had been saying for decades: carbon pollution caused by burning their fuels causes climate change. We have seen record temperatures and once-in-century storms that now recur year after year, increased asthma, COPD and heat related injuries, crops that fail because of drought and torrential rains, bridges, roads, coastal and utility infrastructure that must be rebuilt at vast cost. We've all been paying the piper, and it's time to make the polluters pay for the damage they've caused.
