

Janet Yancey-Wrona
Falmouth
LD 380

I strongly oppose having legislators decide what type of health care a person should received. Regulations already are in place to protect children, and treating children who are intersex or trans, should be a decision made between the individual, their family and the doctor. It should be based on evidence and the person's situation. Changing this law will cause this already marginalized population to see treatments that are not proven and worse are harmful. Allow medical professionals to provide the medical care they train their entire lives to provide.