

Ashley Webb
Farmington
LD 233

This bill is discriminatory, we have a extremely out dated system of assigning gender at birth. You can try to argue well DNA then, and sad part is you can run multiple DNA tests on the same person looking at karyotype and come up with different results each time.

I was born in a way that my body produces male level testosterone, and female level estrogen. My estrogen fluctuate like a women's estrogen does, I have a cycle in which I get monthly cramping like pain accompanied with bleeding, I ovulate as well.

The doctors and specialists are baffled.

FYI my birth certificate says I am a male.

Even if my DNA was to come back XX, the drafter of this bill and the sponsors are so warped in the head they would still say I am male because that is what the birth certificate says.