

Emmett Russell
Rangeley
LD 380

Transgender people are a natural variation of humanity, whose self-determination and success has until recently been held back by lack of access to treatments that reduce distress. Affirming care, which is far and away proven to be more effective than any other, allows transgender Mainers to be positive contributors to their families, communities, and state economy and general welfare. Any attempt to limit access to affirming care can be motivated nothing other than animus. Harming trans Mainers and the practitioners that treat them harms Maine.

Reject this attempt to harm Maine.