Senator Carney, Representative Kuhn, and Honorable Members of the Judiciary Committee.
Thank you for the opportunity to address the Committee. My name is Nathan Hall, I'm a resident of Portland. I'm here today in opposition of the anti-transgender bills before the committee.

I've been a 6th grade teacher in Maine for my entire career, 16 years. In that time, I've taught close to a thousand students. 6th graders have taught me how important it is to be accepted for who you are. When a 6th grader doesn't feel accepted they aren't in a mental space to be able to learn to their full potential. This applies to kids who don't speak English, live in a shelter, or are transgender or non-binary.

I've had numerous transgender and non-binary students in my classroom, but I'd like to share about one in particular. This student was in my class about 7 or 8 years ago. He would spend his mornings before school in my room to avoid the teacher who would release students to class by saying, "Alright boys and girls." He had to tell his peers multiple times that he was a boy because they misgendered him, most of the time on purpose. He had to deal with another teacher asking him why he can't just be normal. And he was taught by teachers who, while they were quiet in their disdain, would vocalize behind closed doors their displeasure with him by saying "Why can't people just be who they're supposed to be?" Implying they wanted others to be something they could be comfortable with, instead of changing their own views to accept the students in front of them.

This student didn't feel accepted at school and his mental health suffered greatly because of it.

Since then most of my colleagues have changed how they see and understand transgender and nonbinary youth. Instead of being frustrated by them, they are supportive and caring. Offering their classrooms as an oasis in a time when so many people in political office talk about erasing them.

The problem which you should be focusing on is ensuring that all students are accepted at school. Not trying to harm some of the most vulnerable students.

Every two years my students complete the Maine Integrated Youth Health Survey. In 2023 3% of the students reported to be transgender. Of that 3%, 73% reported having been bullied on school property. That is the highest percentage of all of the categories. 79% of those transgender students reported feeling sad or hopeless almost every day for two weeks or more in a row. Again the highest percentage of all of the categories. 72.9% said in the past 30 days their mental health was not good most of the time or always. Again the highest percentage. 67.5% of those students reported thinking about killing themselves. Again the highest. 62.2% reported they had made a plan to kill themselves. Again the highest. Finally, 38.6% reported having tried to kill themselves. Again the highest.

I urge you to vote "Ought Not to Pass" on this bill and all of the other bills which limit the rights and protections of some of Maine's most vulnerable youth.
