LD 1911

I support LD 1911, as all prisoners deserve a second chance after they have completed their sentence. Once they're released and on good behavior, prisoners deserve to rebuild their lives without the fear or stigma that comes with post-incarceration life. And in states that have Clean Slate laws, the rates of recidivism -- committing another crime that leads back to prison -- are much lower.

Basically, once a debt is paid, it's paid. Ex-criminals should not be treated as if they're still criminals, once they're out.

For these reasons, I would like to say "ought to pass" for LD 1911.
