Abortion is already available to those who want it in Maine, but shouldn't the mother have some responsibility to the life she has created? Most people know that it takes approximately 9 months before a baby is born.

Does a mother really have to wait until the last minute, when a baby has long been fully ready to begin life outside the mother's womb? Such an important decision determining whether a baby is allowed to live or be discarded shouldn't even be an option except in extreme cases, but if this state is going to allow abortion, it should NOT be allowed so late.

The mother should be responsible and make that decision at the beginning of the pregnancy.
