Please pass this bill to protect and support the hard working farmers that make Maine the great state we love. Incredible farmers and who do this work to grow the healthiest food possible for the land and human bodies now have industrial levels of chemicals in their blood because of devastating pollution spread by the state. We must commit to supporting them in their health and economically and in every way possible. As a farmer who found a field of ours on the state PFAS license map, I'm personally terrified of what this means for our farm business and family health as well. PFAS containing biosolids must not be spread anymore and there must be generous, lifetime support for all those affected. There is so much scientists who specialize in this do not know - I fear we do not yet know the scope of the negative consequences of this pollution. Please support the backbone of our state's agriculture (and tourism) industries: Maine farmers.
