LD 2013

I am a farmer in Gouldsboro, Hancock County, and although my land was not affected by PFAS contamination, I would like to testify in support of LD 2013. I join all my fellow farmers across this good state in recognition of the great travesty that has befallen the land and water where toxic sludge has been spread. It is not a problem that has any quick solutions, but a problem that demands responsibility. Part of the responsibility of the state will be to support those who were inadvertently effected by something that was done by the state's approval, even if it was not known at the time how much of a health risk it could/would pose. Those who farm on and live on land that befell such a faith will need the health care, financial support, and relocation support in order to move forward with their life of feeding the people of Maine.
