I wholeheartedly support this bill, which seems like an obvious bipartisan economic and social mitigation effort to assist Maine farmers to weather the storm of this PFAS fiasco. This issue will be with us for our lifetimes and we can't let farms close or famers languish in a time when supply chains are in question, our climate is destabilizing, and our state's ability to grow and distribute food is more important than ever before. Please support this bill and support our whole state to adapt and thrive for the long term as we address the pressing challenges of our times for the sake of our health, the health of our soils, and the future generations we hope will live, grow, and eat delicious homegrown food in our state.
