I strongly support this legislation, which will provide vitally needed assistance to Maine farmers and others affected by the contamination of their land with PFAS chemicals. These substances were spread with the knowledge and endorsement of the State of Maine--a grave mistake, it is now clear--and the state has a responsibility to do all it can to mitigate the harm that resulted. The damage to health and well-being is beyond a full remedy, but the State should do everything in its power to make these people whole financially, help them transition their businesses, and assist them with health monitoring and any necessary medical treatment.
