Learning can happen outdoors! I have taught middle school science for 11 years. Each year I make it a goal to bring my classes outside as much as possible and integrate outdoor learning into my yearly curriculum. Almost every topic I teach can be connected to our natural world or, can be taught outside. I would love for all middle school students to have a chance for a life-changing learning experience at one of Maine's renowned outdoor learning centers! This would connect our students to our amazing natural resources in our state and to help build a culture of stewardship within our youth.
