

Taylor Pinkham
Augusta

"Bump stock" devices are not integral to the firearms they are installed on, therefore, considering them as "machine guns" makes about as much sense as considering your fingers to be machine guns, as a shooter can fire a semi-automatic rifle just as fast using only their fingers so long as they practice a certain technique.