

Janet Drew
York

I'm not sure of the intent of this bill. My belief is that police should not be routinely in all schools, this practice was federally supported by Homeland security after 9/11 and is pervasive often uncomfortable for children of color and of questionable value since there really is no data collected or reported on the activities or incidents incidents associated with their presence in schools. There are other professionals like social workers and mentors who can offer more valuable supports with less feelings of surveillance and policing. Reevaluate SROs in schools