

Leslie Jones
Winthrop

At the IEP 8th grade going to 9th everyone wanted to remove ADD from my son's plan and I refused to sign and argued that while he is not behaviorally ADD he has the executive functioning disorders that come with it. They removed ADD from his diagnoses without my consent and he has nearly wasted an entire 9th grade year struggling with the executive functioning issues while they come up with a plan to address it. ADD was always one of his diagnoses why not revert back to the plan that was removed without my consent? Unless there was no plan, or they weren't providing it.