To whom it may concern,

I am speaking in support of the new bill that will put free sanitary products for women in school bathrooms in Maine. I think it's very important, especially because lower income families can't always afford products like pads and tampons, and also a lot of girls don't carry around pads or tampons or quarters in school and other public places, and have nothing to use when they get their periods. This bill is important for girls so they always have what they need when they're at school, and never have to worry about needing pads or tampons. Personally, I have never carried around quarters or pads or tampons at school, and I think it'd be a lot better for girls all over the state to have free products that are necessary for them right at hand when they need them.

Sincerely,
Linnea Whitton
