I have been homeschooling my children for 9 years. It seems many homeschool parents do not want government money to help with homeschooling. I strongly disagree with them. I think it would be a huge benefit for my family to have financial help to pay for homeschool curricula and materials. It can only improve the educational options for homeschooled children. If a homeschooling family doesn't want the money, they don't have to take it, but it should be available for those of us who know it's a great idea.
