

Lisa Pagano
Kennebunk

Please follow the science and not industries....

"But norovirus isn't coronavirus, and transmission through reusable bags is "a very unlikely route of transmission [for coronavirus]," said Dr. Jodi Sherman, associate professor of epidemiology at Yale School of Public Health.

Sherman says it was prudent in the early days of the pandemic to limit reusable bags, but now coronavirus transmission routes are better understood. "Single-use or reusable bags are no better or worse for transmission or prevention of transmission of the COVID infection," she said."

Source:

<https://stateimpact.npr.org/pennsylvania/2020/09/03/scientists-know-more-about-how-covid-19-spreads-so-is-it-safe-to-bring-your-reusable-bags-back-to-the-grocery-store/>