Hello,

I have held a master electricians license for 30 years and do not think this bill is a good idea. To be an electrician requires college and being skilled with working with your hands in adverse conditions. As the electrical code requires doing good quality work. This is best acquired by one licensed electrician working with one unlicensed person. This bill will just flood the market with laborers that haven't been to college or not currently enrolled in an apprenticeship, thus not producing the skilled licensed electricians that are needed.

Sincerely,
Michael Varney
