

Craig Moody
Mattawamkeag
LD 716

When I first moved to northern Penobscot county our property was infested with aggressive coyotes that tried getting my livestock and pets. It took me a few years but I finally have them under control with night hunting and trapping. If you take away our ability to try and control these predators it will be detrimental to the states wildlife and they will get more aggressive with people and pets. Bangor has a big coyote problem over 40 cats have been eaten in one area and know one will help them. Now imagine the whole state like that.