

Ann Schaer
Waldoboro
LD 958

The Wabanaki Nations are sovereign governments with the inherent power to regulate their own territories and should not be subject to eminent domain. This protection is already afforded to almost all of the other federally recognized tribes.

If a project would truly benefit the public, the state should work with the tribes to reach a solution.