

Laura McLean
Scarborough
LD 380

It's crucial and constitutionally protected to provide health care to folks; first and foremost, to do no harm. By denying providers the protection to practice essential medicine, we are putting health care providers in positions in which they are in violation of their oath, thereby denying folks their identity. We are not only doing harm to the patient, but acting in contrast to our inherently American believe that all people are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. We should keep the verbiage as the law currently exists to protect our most vulnerable; those who were born different; no fault of their own but that they were created and born like the rest of us.