

Jason Davis
Greene

Distinguished committee members,

The unending “state of emergency” has really become laughable at this point. I completely agree that at the very beginning, very little was known about this virus and how deadly it was or how contagious it was. As time has gone on, we’ve seen that the survival rate is very high and successful treatments and now even vaccines have been implemented. The numbers in Maine have never constituted a state of emergency and certainly not justified the citizens of Maine not having representation by their elected officials. This dictatorship needs to end.