Being new to Maine and having lived in many other states, vehicle inspections is a new and quite honestly cumbersome nuisance. I have a car that has a glitch in the system and because of that i fail the inspection, every single time. My car drives and is perfectly safe for the road. I do not think that cars less than 20 years old should be inspected, I am against inspection, period. It is the vehicle owner's responsibility to take care of their car, not the govt. To mandate that someone have nothing wrong with their car or they fail inspection is ludicrous. I have several things i need to fix before they will pass me, several 1000s of dollars. it is not feasible for low income and middle income families. Most states in this country do not do this, it is an infringement on personal rights. I am against this and will continue to be so. I haven't been able to get a sticker in over a year, because every time i go, i need to fix something else and my check engine light never goes off, and it goes one very time i get gas, it is a known glitch with this car.
