Increasing the plant count would allow small caregivers the same opportunity to compete in a market that would be fair compared to the "big guys". As a very small family, home operated farm, to be able to have more plants would give me a competitive edge I haven't had yet. It would allow me more employees, more hours for employees plus a better option for medicine for our patients, we could finally produce enough to give our patients what they NEED and WANT. With the increase, all local taxes will increase (more money for maine), slow down the black market (people won't hit the streets looking when everyone's out this summer or spring by the looks of it.) please consider the increased plant count for us small mainers
