I am the son of a legal immigrant that came to this country after WWII having escaped being rounded up by Nazi's not once but twice during the occupation of Holland. He came here for a better life for himself like any other person would have at that time. He arrived with a job and housing waiting for him. He learned English. He became a US citizen. He married my mother who just a few years earlier had lost her fiancé in the battle of Taejon North Korea. They raised a family and showed me that good character and hard work will be rewarded with a full life of Freedom, and Happiness. The vision of the Founding Fathers of this country.

But now this country is being flooded with people who don't share in that vision. They come here and don't expect to work for any of this American Dream. They expect to be handed free housing and food to live. A check in the mail instead of a job. And there are people, evil people, who want them to be able to vote. So they can remain on the free ride our government is giving them. Living off the hard work of those who have earned the right to say they are a United States Citizen. You need to show an ID to board a plane, cash a check, buy alcohol or cigarettes, rent a movie, get a book from the library. It should damn well be required to show your ID to vote in any election.
